A LETTER FROM THE STUDIO

One of the exciting aspects of my job is the chance to meet with some of Hollywood's biggest stars. Since becoming Chairman of The Walt Disney Studios, I've gotten to work with such stars as Bette Midler, Tom Cruise, Tom Hanks, Warren Beatty . . . and now Darkwing Duck.

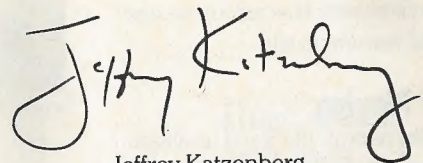

But no matter how many stars I've gotten to know, I must admit that every time I meet one for the first time I get a little anxious. And my first get-together with Darkwing Duck was certainly no exception. You see, Darkwing is a mysterious fellow who's very difficult to track down. So, I had to charter a flight to the City of St. Canard with pilot Launchpad McQuack, whom many of you know from DuckTales.

This was my first mistake. Launchpad's motto is, "Any crash you can walk away from is a good crash." Somehow we managed to arrive in one piece, took a taxi to a dark alley, where we waited anxiously until midnight. Suddenly, as the clock struck 12, the eerie silence was broken by the roar of a motorcycle driven by Darkwing with his adopted daughter, Gosalyn.

Darkwing ordered us to "jump on." He then drove us, at incredible speeds, through the back streets of the town, until we came to the edge of Audubon Bay. Instead of stopping, Darkwing gunned the engine and sped up the main cables holding up Audubon Bay Bridge, taking us directly to his secret hideout—the notorious Darkwing Tower.

Once I caught my breath, I immediately realized the wisdom of getting Darkwing and Gosalyn to star in the newest Disney animated series, Darkwing Duck. The hide-out was filled with evidence of their daring battles with the evil villains lurking in the shadows of St. Canard.

In April, you, too, can join Darkwing and Gosalyn on their adventures. And you don't have to risk your neck flying with Launchpad to do it. Just tune in Saturdays and Sundays at 8:30 a.m., beginning April 6, to see this exciting new show, exclusively on The Disney Channel.

"Mary, Mary, Quite Contrary"

"Mary" wants to take care of her "garden" all by herself. When you interrupt her, she'll act "quite contrary," but only for a moment. Just tell her how pretty her garden is, and she'll soon be all smiles again!

"Mary, Mary, Quite Contrary" is the first issue in a new collection of hand-painted porcelain dolls by artist Dianna Effner, produced under the hallmark of the Edwin M. Knowles China Company.

"Mary's" full-sleeved frock is tailored of cotton-blend floral fabric in soft pastels. Over it, she wears a dainty pinafore highlighted by smocking, pintucking, threaded ribbon, and embroidered eyelet trim. Her matching pantalettes are trimmed in eyelet and ribbon, and her leather-like shoes complement her outfit. Even her watering can and pail of flowers are hand-decorated.

Recommended by the Ashton-Drake Galleries, "Mary, Mary, Quite Contrary" is certified Premiere Grade—your assurance of superior artistry and craftsmanship. At $78.00, she is an heirloom-quality doll of exceptional value today, and may prove to be a wise investment for the future.

Bring this delightful nursery-rhyme character into your home. Act promptly... "Mary, Mary" is issued in a hand-numbered edition that will close forever in 1991. Once closed, the molds will be destroyed and no more will ever be made, so order today.

Disney Facts OUR READERS WANT TO KNOW

What is the story behind the “oo-hoo-hoo-hoey” yell when a character falls in a Disney cartoon?

—B.Z., Raton, NM

The distinctive falling yell was a Goofy trademark, originally done by Pinto Colvig, who provided Goofy's voice. It has been used in many films, most recently in The Prince and the Pauper.

Did Walt Disney approve the plans for the castle at Walt Disney World, or was it designed after his death?

—M.M., Snellville, GA

The Cinderella Castle was not designed before Walt Disney's death. In the late 1960s, teams of designers at WED Enterprises (now Walt Disney Imagineering) studied famous European palaces and castles of the right era, including Fontainebleau, Versailles and the chateaus of Chenonceau, Chambord and Chaumont. The designers also turned to the original designs for the 1950 Cinderella film prepared by the Disney animation staff. The chief designer for the castle was Herb Ryman, who also worked on Sleeping Beauty Castle at Disneyland park.

Disney Channel Trivia CLASSIC ANIMATION

• Veteran Disney animators Ollie Johnston and Frank Thomas (two of the famed Disney “nine old men”) have written the definitive illustrated book on the making of Bambi (Bambi: The Story and the Film). It is published by Stewart, Tabori, & Chang and is currently available in bookstores. Their earlier Disney Animation: The Illusion of Life has already become a classic in the field.

David Hall began work on Alice in Wonderland in 1938.

• 1991 marks the 40th anniversary of Walt Disney's animated classic, Alice in Wonderland (see page 44). The film had its world premiere in England on July 26, 1951. Walt had thought of making a film of the Alice in Wonderland story in the early 1930s, possibly starring Mary Pickford; it was not until 1938 that he got started on the project in earnest. By then, the film was planned to be solely animation, and David Hall, a Hollywood artist and designer, was put to work interpreting the story in illustrations. But, with World War II intervening, it was over a decade before the film was finally produced.

Looking Back

WALT DISNEY AND THE GOOD NEIGHBOR POLICY

Fifty years ago as Europe was moving deeply into World War II, America was not yet involved, but dark clouds were gathering on the horizon. President Franklin D. Roosevelt was worried about the influence of Nazi Germany extending to our neighbors in South America. As part of the government's Good Neighbor Policy, Nelson Rockefeller, then-Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs in the State Department, asked Walt Disney if he would travel to Latin America on a goodwill tour. Walt argued that he did not want to go on a hand-shaking trip—but he was willing to take some of his artists and make some animated cartoons about the area. This was agreeable to Rockefeller, so the Disney contingent set off in 1941 for Argentina, Brazil and Chile, bringing back to Hollywood sketches, songs and impressions of the South American life and culture. Two films came out of the trip: Saludos Amigos and The Three Caballeros. Both proved so successful with theater audiences that Walt did not need the subsidy promised him by the government.

Environment NURTURING NATURE STUDY

"Our job is to make sure the kids have a good time outdoors," says Greer Chesher, an environmental education specialist for the National Park Service, in Newbury Park, California.

That sounds simpler than it is, according to Chesher, who observes that many children have been "over-taught" in nature study: they have found their forays into the wild world to be filled with more information than exploration. The trick for parents who want to share the joy of nature with their children, Chesher points out, is to let their kids be the leaders and follow them as they pursue a million little things.

"We tend to turn our time with nature into a lesson," says Chesher. "We think we need to find something important to talk about. Truth is a child's own fascination with a pill bug crossing the city sidewalk is more important than offering lesson-type information on insects—or anything else."

Chesher says that the study of nature today is essential because children—especially those raised in the city—tend to believe the environment is relatively unimportant. Even though they may be increasingly involved in recycling efforts, children often don't translate that effort into a personal sense of appreciation for the natural world, and they may not realize that everything we use comes from the environment. "And the younger you start with children, the better their sense of caretaking of the earth will be as they get older. It also gives them a better sense of themselves."

Chesher has found that most parents and teachers feel they don't have the skills they need to introduce children to nature. She models her approach on what she remembers from her own childhood. Chesher says she'll never forget how her father would create special moments for her to see and explore. "My dad woke me up in the middle of the night to see the first sputnik as it orbited the earth. And I'll never forget the long walks we took in the snow under a full moon or the times we went fishing at dusk."

Chesher's father never lectured her on how things happened or what they were called. "I remember, if we came upon an old, de-

Environment PLANTING THE SEEDS OF GARDENING

Far too many children think the food chain is a string of supermarkets. It's easy to get to college without ever seeing a piece of corn growing on its stalk, pulling a ripe peach off its branch, or gathering seeds straight from a drying sunflower.

Gardening with children can transform that lack of awareness into an appreciation for what it takes to grow food and nurture flowers. The garden can also be a great science laboratory for teaching everything from weather to soil microbiology, from ecology to nutrition.

According to Larry Sommers, educational products manager with the National Gardening Association in Burlington, Vermont, helping a child get started with gardening is easy. "Give the child his own pot, a garden plot, or an indoor plastic greenhouse, and give him an opportunity to guide what he wants to grow. Let him do as much as possible himself, and he'll love it."

Sommers suggests parents encourage their children to make gardening a long-range project by helping them select and sow seeds, transplant the seedlings, prepare the soil, care for the garden, and

The book gives tips on everything from how to build the base of the castle to the secrets of a good exterior.

Kids in the Kitchen MEASURE FOR MEASURE

The following list of equivalent measures may come in handy for young cooks, especially if he or she wants to double a recipe or cut it in half. If your recipe calls for 1/4 cup sugar, for example, and you want to cut the recipe in half, then you'll need 1/8 cup of sugar. But you don't have an 1/8 cup measure.

You have tablespoons, though, and 1/4 cup of anything equals 4 tablespoons. Therefore, in halving the quantities, you'll use 2 tablespoons of sugar.

(The grown-up cook may also find she needs some of this information for a work guide as well.)

3 teaspoons	= 1 tablespoon
4 tablespoons	= 1/4 cup
16 tablespoons	= 1 cup
1 cup	= 1/2 pint or 8 fluid ounces
2 cups	= 1 pint or 16 fluid ounces
4 cups	= 1 quart
1 stick butter or margarine	= 8 tablespoons or 1/2 cup or 1/4 pound

teriorating log, for example, he'd say, 'Oh, I wonder how that happened,' or we'd think of different ways it could have ended up where it was." She recommends parents try to get their children to express their own ideas about what they are seeing. Saying things like "How do you think..." and "Let's see if . . ." tend to get children going, she says.

Chesher encourages parents not to be intimidated by questions they can't answer. "Don't panic when a child says, 'What's this?' Just bring a backpack of guide books on the hike, and look it up together."

The key to enjoying nature with children, Chesher adds, is to pretend you're a child yourself. She suggests parents try to imagine they are seeing things for the first time, capturing the wide-eyed, happy, enthusiastic excitement of youth.

Compared to the five leading chocolate candies, Maple Oatmeal Quaker Chewy Granola Bars have, ounce for ounce, 1/3 less sugar and 1/3 less fat. So try new Maple Oatmeal Quaker Chewy Granola Bars. Because the maple oatmeal taste kids love for breakfast is really going places.

Choose Quaker Chewy.®

For older children, who may be more wise than wide-eyed, Chesher encourages parents to try projects and more goal-oriented activities. A five-mile hike, a sketch book, canoeing or bike riding, creating a leaf collection or a rain gauge may attract the interest of the fifth and sixth grader. But she cautions not to rush into the projects, because "for many who have been part of a structured education system, free exploration may be an exciting liberation in learning."

Although Chesher has taught children in some of the most beautiful natural classrooms on earth—Zion and Grand Canyon National Parks—she says parents can take their children on nature explorations literally anywhere. "It doesn't have to be a national park, it can be down the block," she points out.

"Whatever you do," Chesher says, "drop your timetable and your agenda, and just have fun."

HEART DISEASE STARTS IN CHILDHOOD

Researchers at the Departments of Movement Sciences and Education at Columbia University have published the first study to examine the effects of fitness and fatness on children. They found that eating and exercise habits formed in early childhood may influence the risk of adult cardiovascular disease. The researchers looked at 216 five- and six-year-old children and found significant relationships between aerobic fitness and blood pressure. They found no association between dietary factors, such as calorie intake, and fitness or blood pressure. Their advice? Start young to develop cardiovascular health.

COMMON COLD TREATMENT QUESTIONED

Breathing in warm moist air—steam—to help soothe the symptoms of the common cold may actually make matters worse, not better. A Cleveland Clinic study published in the Journal of the American Medical Association suggests that steam inhalation increases cold symptoms rather than relieves them. The researchers think hot humidified air may damage the nasal mucosa in people with upper respiratory tract infections—colds.

MAKING SCHOOL EASIER

Helping children with their homework isn't a simple proposition. It's often tough to know how to help when a child has trouble with homework assignments. The School Division of the Association of American Publishers offers a 36-page booklet, "Helping Your Child Succeed in School" ($1.50). The booklet not only covers the basics—such as setting limits and fostering self-esteem—but provides practical tips for easier learning, memory shortcuts, schoolwork scheduling and taking good notes. It also discusses the warning signs of school trouble and offers options for getting children back on course. Write AAP, East 23rd Street, New York, NY 10010.

PLANTING THE SEEDS

harvest. The long-term project approach, he says, teaches kids some of the most important lessons about nature: "Gardens don't happen overnight. It's a real stewardship. And projects that allow children to experience the full cycle of a plant's life or a season give them more than a snapshot of a magical experience. It gives them something they'll remember the rest of their lives."

Gardening is increasingly being incorporated into school curricula as a life science teaching tool. The National Gardening Association has published a Guide to Kids' Gardening (Lynn Ocone with Eve Pranis, John Wiley & Sons, $9.95) which covers everything from gardening basics to topics like "Brewing Solar Mint Tea," "Raising Worms" and "Keeping Growth Charts." The Association also sells The GrowLab™ Indoor Garden and curriculum, geared to students in kindergarten through eighth grade. And Life Lab, an organization based in Santa Cruz, California, and partially funded by the U.S. Department of Education National Diffusion Network, markets a curriculum (The Growing Classroom, by Roberta Jaffe and Gary Appel, Addison-Wesley Publishing Company, 1990, $27.00) that is designed to teach garden ecology, climate, nutrients, food choices, problem solving, the scientific method, and consumerism.

Lisa Glick, education director for Life Lab Science Program, says there are now more than 500 schools across the country using Life Lab's approach. "Gardens have been taking place in schools for centuries," she says. "But this system is more than gardening for the sake of gardening. It increases self-esteem, creates a common ground for children of all abilities, and is a fun and meaningful way to teach science."

TIPS FOR HELPING A CHILD START A HOME GARDEN

- Start with a small patch of land—four square feet. For a small child, that will be plenty to care for. Plant different seeds in each of the four square feet.
- For very small children, start with small seedlings rather than seeds. The children's attention spans are shorter and they'll appreciate the head start.
- Get a simple gardening reference guide.
- Go for low maintenance plants.
- Learn with the child; don't be afraid to experiment.

WHEN IS A SORE THROAT SERIOUS?

Sore throats—almost as common in childhood as runny noses and skinned knees—often need more attention than parents realize.

There is a big difference between a pre-cold sore throat and a painful, potentially serious strep throat. About 90 percent of children will get a strep throat—a bacterial infection—sometime in their childhoods, typically in the years from two to seven. The infection, if untreated, carries the risk of rheumatic fever, an increasingly common disease which can permanently damage the heart and kidneys.

How can parents tell the difference between a cold (viral) infection and something more serious? According to Carol Roberts

Gerson, M.D., F.A.A.P., F.A.C.S., a pediatric otolaryngologist at Children's Memorial Center in Chicago, children with a strep infection often have swollen neck glands as well as a severe sore throat, and sometimes get fever, a stomachache or nausea and vomiting. Often parents will notice their child has a sore throat without a stuffy nose or a cough, a sign that the problem may be caused by something other than a cold virus.

"Of course, parents can't take the kids to the doctor every time there's a sore throat," says Timothy J. Reichert, M.D., an ear/nose/throat specialist in St. Louis, Missouri. "So they've got to look at the whole child," he says, suggesting parents look for signs of fatigue and general discomfort.

But if there is any question, physicians recommend parents take their children to the pediatrician for a strep antigen test, which can offer information in half an hour. If the test is positive, the child typically is given penicillin or a similar antibiotic for 10 days. If it is negative, physicians will usually take a throat culture, which takes 24 to 48 hours, to make sure the infection is not present.

Once the antibiotic treatment begins, children usually feel better within a day or two. It's essential that they take a full 10 days of antibiotics, though, to prevent a recurrence of the infection that could develop into rheumatic fever. Some physicians will do a culture after the antibiotic therapy is completed, just to make sure the treatment has been effective.

As for siblings and other children who may have been exposed to the child with strep throat, some physicians recommend they also get a throat culture if they have suspicious symptoms.

For everyone—children and parents alike—the experts say the best way to prevent strep throat is still to stick with the basics: eat a good diet, get lots of rest, and stay away from others with the infection until they have been on antibiotics for 24 hours.

Coping WHEN PARENTS AND KIDS COMPETE

A parent, a child and a board game. It starts out fun—picking out the game pieces, a quick roll of the dice, $100 in play money here and there. And the next thing you know, it's tense.

If the child is winning, he may be gloating and off-putting to the others around him. If he's losing, he may be tearful and frustrated. And sometimes the parent doesn't handle the ups and downs any better than the child does.

Such are the risks of parent-child competition, but experts say that if games and one-to-one sports are handled well, they can teach children sportsmanship, problem-solving, and the basics of learning to follow the rules.

Parents have to go into a game—whether it's a simple game of chance with a four-year-old or a more strategic competition, such as chess with a 12-year-old—with an understanding that they are playing with someone who has an automatic age, skill and maturity disadvantage. And according to Michele Breckenridge, child development specialist at Discovery Toys in Martinez, California, the parents who should be the most careful about how they're competing are the ones who aren't getting enough time to play or relax in their own lives.

Parents without their own recreational outlets, Breckenridge says, sometimes use the game as a release for their own tension, and they may have trouble seeing that the objective of the game is to give their child fun and excitement.

"A lot of parents aren't getting enough time for play—it's part of today's pace—so parents have to ask themselves, 'What's my objective here?'" Breckenridge says.

She also suggests that parents try to look at their own behavior when they are playing a game and ask themselves what they are communicating to their children. "Try to keep the competition light, be willing to bend the rules for the child if you need to, stay flexible, and watch your kids to see how they're reacting to the game,"

Breckenridge says.

Of course, as a child matures, there may be a time when he wants the challenge of playing against someone more skilled than himself. "Gauge when he's ready for a slam in ping-pong, for example,

HOW TO CHOOSE A GOOD FAMILY BOARD GAME

Experts offer these tips on how to select a good game for parents and children to play together:

1. Find out how the game is played: the objective and the rules. You can't judge a game by its cover; sometimes the most beautiful game boards don't offer a fun, challenging, and exciting game.
2. Look for games that offer different levels of play for family members of different ages.
3. Try to play the game before you buy it, either at the store or at a friend's house. Different people react to games in different ways.

DO YOU KNOW WHAT CITY THIS IS?

Ever since the National Geographic Society released its 1989 study, which showed that 53 percent of Americans could not find Britain on a map, parents and teachers have been trying to put more emphasis on geography. There is a new booklet available from the U.S. General Services Administration called Helping Your Child Learn Geography ($.50), designed to teach children the basics of geography in a fun format. The booklet includes a fold-out outline map of the U.S. for children to check their geography smarts. Write: R. Wood, Consumer Information Center-T, P.O. Box 100, Pueblo, Colorado, 81002.

and then if he misses it, watch his reaction to the loss to see if he's as ready as you thought for the tough challenges," Breckenridge suggests.

Deborah Feltz, a sports psychologist with the Youth Sports Institute at Michigan State University in East Lansing, suggests that parents give children a handicap right from the start. "If you have a height advantage in basketball, why start out with a score of 0-0? Start out giving the child 20 points," she says. One mother adapts that principle to other games as well, relinquishing her queen in chess right from the start, or giving all the kids an extra $500 at the start of the Monopoly game.

Feltz suggests that when a child does demand full, hold-nothing-back competition, parents should talk about the game afterwards. "Let him or her express his feelings about it," she says.

Communication can happen during the game, too. Feltz watched a good friend play basketball with her nephew recently and was impressed with the way the friend offered a running commentary on the game as it was going on. "She focused on his technique, suggested obtainable goals and pointed out a lot of the good shots, all through the game," Feltz says, adding that she feels that approach is a lot more beneficial than focusing on the outcome alone. "And if you're playing tennis, it might be better just to keep the game cooperative, by seeing how long the two of you can keep the ball going, for example."

What about the child who doesn't handle victory well? Breckenridge suggests parents point out the winning behavior of Olympic stars as a good example, and also be sure that the parents themselves don't gloat with the pleasure of a win.

Experts say that if a parent finds that nothing but a victory makes playing fun, then the parent shouldn't play with a child. "If you've got to beat your kids, take yourself out of the game," says Feltz.

Child Development LEARNING TO TALK: WHEN KIDS NEED HELP

There's almost nothing cuter than a toddler's baby talk, the sweet attempts at making language work and the special words only the family can understand. But often parents wonder if their child's speech is progressing as it should, especially if they can understand another child more easily than they can their own.

In early language development, there is a wide range of normal, says Judith Greenstate, pre-school speech and language advisor for the Los Angeles Unified School District. She says that parents often expect better-than-average

GET YOUR CHILD'S SPEECH EVALUATED IF...

- You don't understand your child, or
 - Family and friends don't understand him or her, or
 - Your child—if two or over—is not talking at all, or
 - Your child is very reluctant to speak, or
 - Your child has trouble chewing or swallowing, or
 - Your child has had chronic ear infections, or
 - Your baby, at six to seven months, doesn't babble or produce sounds.

speech from their three-year-olds, who typically are capable only of basic communication.

But if parents begin to notice that others cannot understand their child, they should seek evaluation. "One of the main reasons children have trouble with sounds is a series of inner ear infections," Greenstate explains. Sometimes the infections inhibit the child's ability to hear sounds. A pediatrician or speech and language therapist can evaluate the child to make sure there is no hearing loss. If the child has suffered a hearing disturbance, a language therapist may treat the child by bombarding him or her with developmentally appropriate sounds to help him catch up.

Children who are difficult to understand, and who have no hearing loss, should be evaluated to see what sounds they are making, omitting, substituting or adding. If they cannot form the sounds that are expected for children of their age, a series of play/activity/therapy sessions may be recommended.

The question parents typically ask when speech therapy is recommended is, "Why shouldn't we just wait and see if he grows out of it?" Greenstate's response: "Why risk it?"

Evaluating a child as soon as parents begin to wonder about a potential problem is likely to reduce their anxiety, she says. An evaluation can also gather information that may be helpful to a pre-school or kindergarten teacher, even if speech therapy is not suggested.

"If it is suggested to you that your child needs an evaluation, do it," Greenstate says. "Don't wait." Communication skills are essential to thinking, to social relationships, and to success in school—and early language problems sometimes develop into learning disabilities and other problems if help isn't received.

DIAGNOSING DYSLEXIA

Reading specialists don't agree on what dyslexia is, let alone how to test for it. For example, a recent study done by Frank Manis, a University of Southern California psychologist, finds that printing letters backward is often not, in itself, a cause for concern. Difficulty learning the rhymed lyrics of songs, however, or not being able to catch on to the idea that "bat" rhymes with "cat" may be an early warning sign that there's a problem. In any case, how a child reads and learns is affected by so many factors, and how difficulties are perceived and handled can have such a profound affect on the child, either positive or negative, that it's important to approach the diagnosis of dyslexia with caution as well as openness. Start by consulting teachers and specialists you trust.

World Television Premiere ALL DOGS GO TO HEAVEN

"In All Dogs Go To Heaven we had a remarkable electricity between the actors," remarks Don Bluth (the creator of An American Tail) of the stars who provided the voices for his acclaimed animated film, which receives its world television premiere on The Disney Channel on Saturday, March 2, at 7:00 p.m. (ET/PT). Set in 1939

New Orleans, All Dogs Go to Heaven is the tale of a rascally German shepherd named Charles B. Barkin. Providing the voice of Barkin is Burt Reynolds; other "castmembers" include Dom DeLuise, Loni Anderson, Charles Nelson Reilly and Melba Moore.

"There was almost no direction," Bluth adds. "I'd give the actors a few ideas of what was needed, and then I'd be chased out of the room. Their ad-libs were often better than the original script!"

The Best of Hollywood FROM HOLLYWOOD EPICS TO A HEPBURN FESTIVAL

Since the silent era, Hollywood has been in love with the spectacular. In March, The Best of Hollywood (Mondays at 9:00 p.m., ET/PT) presents four epic films. The fare includes The Disney Channel premiere of Tora! Tora! Tora! (Academy Award, Special Effects) on March 4; on March 11 it's an encore presentation of John Ford's African romantic adventure, Mogambo; and on March 18, don't miss Robert Taylor, Elizabeth Taylor, Joan Fontaine and George Sanders in the colorful swashbuckler, Ivanhoe. Our slate of Hollywood epics concludes March 25 with Nicholas Ray's haunting King of Kings, starring Jeffrey Hunter.

Once branded "box office poison" in the '30s, Katharine Hepburn went on to prove that she was the finest film actress—comic or dramatic—of her generation. In April, The Best of Hollywood proudly presents a Hepburn film festival. It begins on April 1 with Woman of the Year (1942), which was directed by George Stevens and earned Hepburn an Academy Award nomination for Best Ac-

"Ezekiel Crane is a sea captain, a strange mysterious figure who keeps the lighthouse on Prince Edward Island," says York of his character. York adds that he was enchanted both by his role and the series. "I think the reason for Avonlea's success is that it's a glimpse back to a way of life that has almost

Samuel E. Wright is a Broadway star and the winner of a Tony Award, but to most Americans he's known as the voice of Sebastian, the calypso crab from The Little Mermaid. Growing up, Billy Joel saw the greats play at Yankee Stadium, and while he knew he would never make the field in "The House that Ruth Built,"

When Billy Joel brought his "Storm Front" tour to his hometown, "The Piano Man" was making local history. With his two sold-out concerts on June 22 and 23, 1990—the first days of summer

—Billy Joel became the first person in 67 years to perform a concert in the home of the New York Yankees—and he brought rock 'n' roll to the celebrated "House that Ruth Built."

"These are my roots," Billy Joel explained at the time. "I was born in the Bronx, and my parents lived here (in New York City) before I was born. And New York is a very special place for us...most of the band comes from here."

"I've been talking about doing Yankee Stadium for years," Joel added. "It was always kind of dropped. Everyone said that they don't allow concerts—no one can play there. So this time I said let's just ask."

Billy Joel Live at Yankee Stadium captures all the wild excitement of Joel's performance. "I've been to stadium shows before," Joel said. "I saw The Who in a stadium show...the Stones ...and the Police. There's such a feeling at one, because everyone in the crowd is a fan. It's the place to be and a celebration of this music that everyone loves and knows. You're part of the home team."

Not only does Billy Joel Live at Yankee Stadium catch the euphoria of the evening but it also offers rousing versions of Joel's latest hits from the celebrated Storm Front album—hits which have won him a new generation of fans. The songs Joel performs with such fiery intensity include "Storm Front," "We Didn't Start the Fire," "The Downeaster Alexa," and "Not Her Style." And Joel doesn't slight his past hits either, performing "Scenes from an Italian Restaurant," "New York State of Mind," and, of course, "Piano Man."

Billy Joel Live At Yankee Stadium is the concert event of the year: a celebrated artist at the height of his powers performing for a hometown crowd—and making history doing it. □

On a spring afternoon in 1959 a group of boys in blue blazers wing by a reflecting pool opposite the chapel of the Blanton Boys Academy, a Southern prep school. These young men are impressionable in their adolescence—ready to grow from youth to manhood. Perfect Harmony, a new Disney Channel Premiere Film, captures this period of youth, when the seemingly most insignificant happening acquires great importance.

Such is the case for Taylor Bradshaw (played by Justin Whalin), a popular student who is vying for the honor of lead soloist in Blanton's prestigious choir. Taylor's strongest competitor is Paul Bain (David Faustino), a self-centered bully. But soon their attention is diverted by a new face on campus, that of Landy Allen (Eugene Byrd), an orphaned black teenager with a gift for playing the blues.

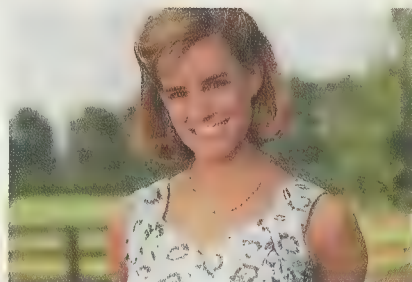

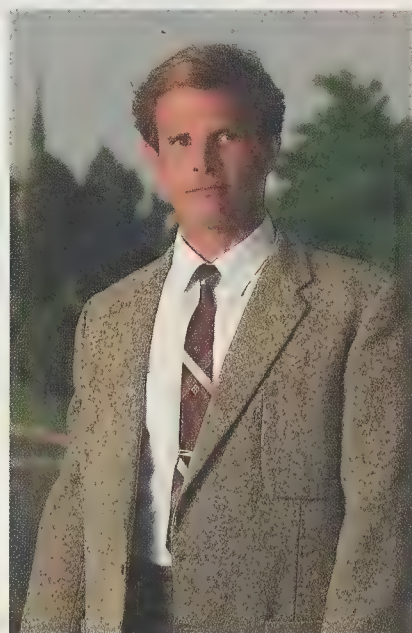

As Landy and Taylor's mutual love of music draws them together, heightened racial tensions in the town threaten to destroy their friendship. Despite the ridicule Taylor receives for befriending a black, there is one person who supports Taylor's ideals: the school's new choirmaster, Derek Sanders, a Northerner. Much to the chagrin of Blanton's conservative headmaster (played by Darren McGavin), Derek's influence on the boys goes far beyond the music he's there to teach them.

"There are many tender stages of youth," says two-time Emmy Award nominee Peter Scolari, who plays Derek Sanders. "But adolescence is the most significant in that young people are still questioning the values of their parents. As a teacher, Derek believes it's his obligation to encourage those questions, to show Taylor and the other boys they can change before they become too rigid in thought."

It is not until a black boy, who has been denied access to the public swimming pool, drowns in the river that racial tensions come to a head. At the forefront of the black protest is Reverend Clarence Branch (played by Cleavon Little), who insists his congregation protest with peaceful resistance. "The characters and beliefs in this movie are close to the bone in me," says Little. "I grew up in a Baptist church. I know what it's like to not be allowed in a store in New York City. I'm very conscious of the inequality that exists even today."

Director Will MacKenzie, who includes

Reading is fun for Sarah—as it should be for every child. At age four-and-a-half, she's already choosing her own books at the San Diego, Cal. library.

She reads books many third graders find "hard going." Yet she won't enter first grade for another year.

Sarah is typical of thousands of children who learned to read with "Listen and Learn with Phonics"—a reading kit that actually makes reading fun.

"Listen and Learn with Phonics" was developed by a reading expert. It has been endorsed, after extensive testing, by teachers, schools, and educators.

This practical (and inexpensive) home-learning kit fascinates eager young minds from three to ten. The child hears the letters or sounds on a cassette, sees them in a book and then repeats them. This makes an absorbing game of better reading — with amazing results.

For example: Slow or average readers show sudden—often spectacular—improvement in reading and spelling. Older children often advance their reading skills several years beyond their age level. Young "pre-schoolers" actually teach themselves to read by this simple but startlingly effective method.

WHAT OTHERS SAY

I am tremendously pleased. My 5-year old is reading very well and I plan to begin with my 4-year old. I am so glad I invested in this set. Judy I. Gay, Stow, Oh.

Last year I taught grades 1-4. I had a 6-year old boy who came to 1st grade reading 6th-grade words. His father had taught him at home using your set. The father donated the set to our school. I was thrilled because some of the children need a lot of extra help with reading and phonics.

Janet Griffin, Triangle School, Apex, N.C.

What a happy Grandma I am! Since I ordered a Phonics set and had it mailed to my granddaughter, Kim, and her 6-year old sister, they are both making A's in school. Mrs. Clarence Sparks, Clearwater, Fl.

among his credits the television series Moonlighting and Family Ties, felt a personal connection to the era and story. "I went to a private boys' school with a three-piece-suit headmaster," MacKenzie remembers. "Perfect Harmony stirred a lot of my memories from that era of great fun and stormy emotions. But the picture is not solely sentimental. There are some tough issues in the film—issues that force today's kids to see the roots of some of our current problems."

In a world where personal decisions can effect the course of history, Perfect Harmony speaks to the courage called forth by making critical choices. "This film is about enlightenment," Cleavon Little concludes. "There's so much disharmony in the world. Perfect Harmony is one of those kinds of pieces that says what we all should be about." □

DAVID FAUSTINO: THE REAL RAP

"I've gone from playing a geek who thinks he's a stud to playing a bully with an attitude," says David Faustino, who stars in Perfect Harmony. Faustino's popularity as Bud Bundy on Married... With Children has helped both his acting credentials and his second career, that of lyricist and lead rapper of the underground rap group, The Outlaw Posse. Any drawbacks to having such a well-known face? "I have to watch everything I do," Faustino confides. "And reporters make up stories about me. One magazine said I was dating Katey Sagal and wrecked my car . . . before I even had my driver's license."

The King is back... a Bradford Exchange recommendation

The legendary '68 "comeback" special is regarded as one of Elvis Presley's greatest performances. Now a magic moment from this history-making show has been captured forever on an unprecedented fine-art collectible.

The "'68 Comeback Special," based on an original painting by noted artist Bruce Emmett, is produced in full color on exquisite fine china, ringed in platinum, and issued under the hallmark of Delphi. And like exceptional plates in the entertainment or show business categories that command hundreds of dollars on the plate market, "'68 Comeback Special" appears to have what it takes to go up in value once the edition closes.

Not every plate goes up in value; some go down. But the edition of "'68 Comeback Special" is strictly limited to a maximum of 150 firing days, and demand is expected to be strong. So if you wish to obtain this plate at the $24.75 issue price, the time to act is now. To order your plate – fully backed by our one-year money-back guarantee – send no money now, simply complete and mail the coupon at right.

How Many Ways Can You Arrange Pontiac Trans Sport's Modular Seats?

Actually, when you consider how easily Trans Sport's modular seats carry up to seven people* flip forward, fold down flat, or can be easily removed and reconfigured... the possibilities are endless.

But Trans Sport's more than just versatile. Its aerodynamic shape is dramatically different. Its fuel-injected 3.1L V6 and front-wheel drive make it fun to drive. And its incredibly strong space frame has special dent-resistant lower body panels that will never rust.

When it comes to quality, versatility and excitement, Trans Sport® is the Pontiac of minivans. The question is, why drive anything else?
